

Our research team aims to understand the underlying psychological mechanisms that contribute to perceptions of Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls (MMIWG). We do this by developing online surveys measuring people's attitudes and beliefs towards MMIWG and their intentions to support ending violence against Indigenous women (e.g., voting, sharing hashtags, signing petitions). Every Monday junior members of our team meet to prepare materials for Thursday meetings with the entire team.